ABSTRACT

In late February 1974 a decision was made by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to implement the State commissions under Section 1202 of the Education Amendments of 1972 on certification by the governors that their State commissions qualified under the act. Three options for meeting criteria set forth in Section 1202 were: (1) creation of a new commission that would meet the criteria; (2) designation of an existing State agency or State commission that already meets the criteria; and (3) augmenting an existing State agency or State commission to meet the criteria. Responses from every State are presented, including the desire to establish; option chosen; HEA programs assigned; commission name, address, telephone number, and principal staff officer; representation on the commission for general public, public 4-year institutions, public community and junior colleges, public vocational schools, private nonprofit institutions, proprietary institutions, and others. In This Issue:

In late February 1974 a decision was made by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to implement the state commissions under Section 1202 of the Education Amendments of 1972 upon certification by the governors that their state commissions qualified under the act. T. Harry McKinney of Michigan State University, former director of the Higher Education Planning and Coordination Services department of the Michigan State Department of Education, agreed to prepare an analysis and tabulation for the 50 states, based on the letters of certification from the governors. We are grateful for the assistance and cooperation of Charles I. Griffith, director of the State Planning Commissions Program of the U.S. Office of Education, who provided Dr. McKinney with the governors' letters and other relevant information.

ESTABLISHMENT OF STATE POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION COMMISSIONS

INTRODUCTION

On March 1, 1974, U.S. Commissioner of Education John Ottina sent a letter to the governor of each state inviting the governor to advise him on the course of action to be followed in implementing Sections 1202 and 1203 of the Education Amendments of 1972. Section 1202 requires any state that wants to receive assistance under Section 1203 or Title X of the same act to establish a state postsecondary education commission that is broadly and equitably representative of the general public and various types of postsecondary institutions—public, private nonprofit and proprietary. Section 1203 authorizes grants and technical assistance to these commissions for comprehensive statewide planning.

HE 005 516

In his letter, Commissioner Ottina explained that funds had been appropriated for establishment of Section 1202 commissions during the current fiscal year and that at least $1 million would be available for this purpose. He stated further that states were not required to establish such commissions unless they wanted to receive assistance, that the law implied three options for meeting criteria set forth in Section 1202, that the only function authorized by law for the commissions was planning for postsecondary education, that a state could designate the Section 1202 commission as the state agency responsible for certain other federal programs if it wanted to do so and that the law required the commission to be broadly and equitably representative.

According to the commissioner, the three options for meeting criteria set forth in Section 1202 were: (1) creation of a new commission that would meet the criteria; (2) designation of an existing state agency or state commission that already meets the criteria; and (3) augmentation of an existing state agency or state commission to meet the criteria. Federal programs that could be assigned were Community Services and Continuing Education (HEA Section 105), Equipment for Undergraduate Instruction (HEA Section 603) and Construction of Undergraduate Academic Facilities (HEA Section 704).

Commissioner Ottina requested a response by April 15 from every state desiring to establish a Section 1202 commission, including: (1) the option chosen to meet the criteria for Section 1202; (2) federal programs assigned to the commission; (3) the official name, address and telephone number of the commission; (4) names, mailing addresses and terms of office for commission members; (5) the name, title, mailing address and telephone number of the principal staff officer; and (6) a letter signed by the governor explaining how membership on the commission meets the "broadly and equitably representative" requirements of Section 1202 and what provisions have been made to insure continuing compliance with the requirements.

The letter from the commissioner was followed by notices in the Federal Register on March 26 and April 11. In the March 26 notice, the official deadline for responses was extended to April 25.

RESPONSES FROM STATES

Letters received by Commissioner Ottina's office on or before April 25 reveal that 43 states plus the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam and Puerto Rico had established Section 1202 commissions. In addition, Alaska expressed a desire to do so but was unable to enact legislation in time to meet the April 25 deadline. The other six states—Colorado, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and Wisconsin—indicated that they did not desire to establish a commission at this time. There was no response from the Virgin Islands, the only other eligible territory.

Of the 43 states that did establish commissions before the deadline, 15 chose the option of establishing new commissions, 19 chose the option of designating existing state agencies or state commissions and 9 chose the option of augmenting (expanding, augmenting or reconstituting) existing state agencies or state commissions. The District of Columbia and American Samoa chose the option of establishing new commissions; Guam and Puerto Rico chose the option of augmenting existing state agencies or state commissions.

The table on page 188 shows the option chosen by each state and the District of Columbia in establishing a Section 1202 commission; federal programs assigned to it; the name, address and telephone number of the commission; the name and title of the principal staff officer; and a columnar summary of the types of representation. The principal staff officer in practically every state was contacted by telephone to determine the accuracy of this information. In many cases, arbitrary decisions had to be made about classification of commission members in terms of representation. Notes have been provided within the limits of available space to indicate some of the complexities, but these do not always reveal the fact that members of a commission may be representative of both the general public and one or more types of institutions. Details from all of the territories were not received in time to be included in the tabulation. Briefly, the commission in American Samoa is a new Board for Higher Education; the commission in Guam is an augmentation of the Board of Regents of the University of Guam; and the commission in Puerto Rico is an augmentation of the Council on Higher Education.

The following paragraphs provide a general description of Section 1202 commissions in the various states and the District of Columbia. States have been grouped according to options chosen for meeting criteria in Section 1202.

NEW COMMISSIONS

States that chose to establish new commissions are Alabama, Arizona, California*, Delaware, Georgia, Kansas, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire*, South Dakota*, Texas, Vermont and West Virginia. The District of Columbia also selected this alternative.

Five of the 15 states—Arizona, California, Delaware, Georgia and South Dakota—assigned all of the specified programs of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (Sections 105, 603 and 704) to the new commissions, as did the District of Columbia. Eight states—Alabama, Kansas, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nevada, Texas, Vermont and West Virginia—assigned none of the programs to them. Two states—Nebraska and New Hampshire—assigned two of the programs to them (Sections 603 and 704).

Membership on these commissions ranges from nine in Alabama to 33 in Minnesota. Three states—Delaware, Kansas and Nevada—have commissions with 11 members; seven states—Arizona, Georgia, Nebraska, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont and West Virginia—have commissions with 13 to 17 members; and three states—California, Mississippi and New Hampshire—have commissions with 21 to 23 members. The new commission in the District of Columbia has 23 members. The average for all 15 states and the District of Columbia is 17 members.

Representation on the new commissions varies from state to state. All except Kansas have at least two members who are designated as being representative of the general public and are not members of a state legislature. In Kansas, all 11 members of the new commission are legislators—five from the senate and six from the house. According to the governor, they were selected by the Legislative Coordinating Council and appointed because they are individually knowledgeable about one or more types of postsecondary institutions and collectively represent districts where all types of institutions are located.

Some of the other states have a relatively small number of members who are designated as being representative of the general public. Alabama has 2 out of 9 in this category; Arizona has 4 out of 14; Georgia has 5 out of 17; Mississippi has 5 out of 22; New Hampshire has 8 out of 21; Texas has 4 out of 17; and the District of Columbia has 8 out of 23. In six states, approximately half of the members are designated as representative of the general public. California has 12 out of 23 in this category; Delaware has 6 out of 11; Minnesota has 15 out of 33; Nebraska has 7 out of 15; South Dakota has 7 out of 13; and Vermont has 8 out of 16.

*These three states actually established their new agencies prior to Commissioner Ottina's letter. The New Hampshire and South Dakota commissions became effective July 1, 1973, and California's commission was effective April 1, 1974.

Two states—Nevada and West Virginia—have included all members of an existing board of regents on new commissions. In each case, the regents are viewed as being representative of the general public and certain types of postsecondary institutions. In Nevada, 9 of 11 members on the new commission are regents. In West Virginia, 9 of 15 are regents.

Each of the various types of institutions in practically every state has at least one person who has been designated as representative of its interests. In addition, some of the people classified as public members in certain states are also viewed as representative of one or more types of institutions. Letters from some of the governors provided detailed information to show how backgrounds or interests of these persons could be related to the different segments of postsecondary education.

EXISTING AGENCIES OR COMMISSIONS

States that decided to designate existing agencies or commissions as Section 1202 commissions are Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon and Wyoming.

Twelve of the 19 states—Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Michigan, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio and Oregon—assigned all of the specified programs (Sections 105, 603 and 704 of the Higher Education Act of 1965) to the Section 1202 commissions. Three states—Maryland, Oklahoma and North Dakota—assigned none of the programs to them. The other four states—Florida, Iowa, Missouri and Wyoming—assigned two of the programs to them (Sections 603 and 704).

The number of members on these commissions ranges from eight in Idaho to 18 in New Jersey. Four states—Iowa, Ohio, Oklahoma and Wyoming—have commissions with nine members; nine states—Florida, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota and Oregon—have commissions with 10 to 13 members; and four states—Connecticut, Illinois, Louisiana and New York—have commissions with 15 to 17 members. The average for all 19 states is 12 members.

Representation on these commissions is generally viewed by governors of the various states as being adequate in terms of legal requirements. In seven states—Idaho, Indiana, Michigan, New Mexico, New York, Ohio and Oklahoma—no attempt was made in letters from governors to identify persons with types of institutions. All members were viewed as being representative of the general public and the various segments of postsecondary education. In 12 states—Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, North Dakota, Oregon and Wyoming—some members were designated as representative of the general public, while others were identified with certain types of institutions.

AUGMENTED AGENCIES OR COMMISSIONS

States that preferred to create Section 1202 commissions by augmenting existing agencies or commissions are Arkansas, Hawaii, Maine, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Utah and Washington.

Two of the nine states—Hawaii and Rhode Island—assigned all of the specified programs (Sections 105, 603 and 704, Higher Education Act of 1965) to the Section 1202 Commissions. Six states—Arkansas, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah and Washington—assigned none of the programs to them. Maine assigned two of the programs to its commission (Sections 603 and 704).

The number of members on the resulting commissions ranges from 14 in Hawaii to 28 in Washington. Two states—Arkansas and Maine—have commissions with 15 members; three states—Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Utah—have commissions with 17 or 18 members; two states—Rhode Island and South Carolina—have commissions with 19 or 20 members. The average for all nine states is 18 members.

In general, new members of these commissions were designated for the purpose of improving representation from the general public or certain types of institutions, particularly public vocational schools, private nonprofit institutions and proprietary institutions. More detailed information shows that Arkansas augmented the State Board of Higher Education with five persons, Hawaii augmented the Board of Regents of the University of Hawaii with four persons; Maine augmented the State Board of Education with six persons; Massachusetts augmented the Board of Higher Education

SUMMARY

As the figures indicate, most of the states have established Section 1202 commissions for funding during the current year. Some have created new commissions, others have designated existing agencies or commissions and others have augmented existing agencies or commissions.

Furthermore, letters from governors of the various states generally reflect a desire to meet the requirements of Section 1202 in terms of representation on the commissions. As stated earlier, notes have been included in the accompanying table to clarify the nature of this representation.
